I have been asked to send emails using EC2 without copying it to local machine. For this I have to copy the email to the SES. But I do not have access to the account that is sending the email. How to send email without copying it to local machine? If the account holder has access to SES, then you don't need to copy it to the SES account, you can just send the mail via the SES API. I've done something similar with AWS Account Number but this is not an SES account. If the account holder doesn't have access to SES, I recommend contacting AWS Customer Support to get assistance. I am afraid that you have access to the account sending the email but you need to have access to the email address to send it to. This can be done with a service like SES. The application runs inside an Azure web role and the TCP socket connection is established by an Azure Worker Role. Everything runs fine, but when I am testing my controller method with MSTest, I get the following error: System.IO.IOException: The request was aborted: Could not create SSL/TLS secure channel. at System.Net.Security.SslState.StartSendAuthResetSignal(ProtocolToken message, AsyncProtocolRequest
